Parents and Students Join Together for Chanukah Vacation Shiur

Monday, December 26th was a day off from school but that didn't stop Torah learning from taking place at TABC. A group of 75 students and parents joined together for Shacharit, breakfast, and a wonderful shiur by our very own Rabbi Daniel Fridman. The shiur, entitled "Yemei Hallel V'Hoda'ah: Reciting Hallel on Chanukah," was informative, enlightening, and enjoyed by all.

Ohel & TABC Join Together for a Chanukah Party

Fifteen sophomores had a wonderful Chanukah party with members from OHEL. They had a pizza lunch, interacted with each other, sang Chanukah songs, and had a lively dance. They finished with a Chanukah trivia game. A great time was had by all!

Highland Park Shabbaton

A record 90 talmidim attended this year's Highland Park Shabbaton, joined by Rabbis Wiener, Malitzky, and Yoni Mandelstam. The Zinkin family hosted a lively Friday night oneg and the group had Shabbat lunch at Congregation Ohr Torah. The talmidim heard a shiur from Rabbi Wiener and learned beautifully together in the Beit Medrash. The Kreitman family hosted Seudat Shlishit where Mr. Kreitman shared words of Torah. On Motz'ei Shabbat, everyone enjoyed basketball, swimming, ping-pong, and pizza in the Edison JCC. Enjoy more photos here.

In case you missed a week you can click here to view past issues.

On Thursday, December 22nd, during the Mincha break, we had our first ever poetry happening in the TABC library. The event was called "Lines in the Library." TABC students who participated in the poetry slam at Kushner earlier in the week were joined by others who presented mostly original poems. The event was emceed by Shai Gutfreund and the boys who presented were Eli Dickman, Dovid Fertig, Tani Greengart, Shai Gutfreund, Moshe Papier, Ori Siegel and Yitzchak Tollinsky. The boys were very enthusiastic and happy to share their poems with friends and faculty.

Distinguished Scholars Program Welcomes Rabbi Simcha Willig

The Distinguished Scholars Program was privileged to host Rabbi Simcha Willig this past week. Rabbi Willig addressed our students on the topic of how to distinguish between primary versus secondary sources, and why that distinction is relevant to their research. Rabbi Willig then reviewed an area of history that he has concentrated on: the unique model of teaching in the Slobodka school. Students were actively engaged and interested in hearing about the research process as well as the fascinating and unique philosophical perspective of the Alter of Slabodka, an approach which gave rise to many Jewish institutions of learning today.

Dr. Harry Lieman Addresses

TABC Students

This past Friday, Dr. Harry Lieman, an Orthodox Jew who is a renowned fertility specialist and father of Josh Lieman '17, addressed a combined group of the Chassidic Thought, Jewish Philosophy and the Torah and Science electives. Dr. Lieman interactively outlined the very large number of potential problems a couple might encounter in their quest to have a child. He noted with great wonder, though, at how eighty five percent of couples are able to produce a child in a year or less of attempting to do so despite the incredibly large number of potential pitfalls. Dr. Lieman noted this as an example of that which we say every day at Shacharit (Tehillim 104:24) "Mah rabu ma'asecha Hashem. Kulam b'chochma asita" ("O Lord, how manifold are Your works! In wisdom have you made them all.").

The presentation was very well-received and recognized as an important step in helping us all grow in our admiration and love of Hashem as well as adding another layer of meaning to our Tefillah.

Torah U'Madda: Psychology in the Parsha

Rabbi Dr. Schnall's AP Psychology students have been studying "context effects" -- the impact of surroundings on one's perception of the environment -- and applying this knowledge to Sefer Bereishit. Ask your son how context effects help us understand the Netziv's view of why Yitzchak did not recognize Yaakov and Yehudah did not recognize Tamar, and also the Ramban's explanation of why Yosef's brothers did not recognize him in Egypt, as we read in this week's Parshat Mikeitz.

Introductory Economics Class Hears from Jeff Miller

The 12th grade Introductory economics and Financial literacy course culminated their study of the role of the Federal Reserve with special guest speaker, Mr. Jeffrey Miller, husband of our own Allison Miller, of the English department. Having worked at the Federal Reserve Bank in New York for over seven years, Mr. Miller shared his insights about the Fed and its role in our economy. In his presentation, Mr. Miller related the role played by the Fed in dealing with both past and present day economic crises. It is always so exciting for students to hear and see "real life" examples of the various theories and concepts being covered in their classes. Mrs. Reichardt and her students are very grateful to Mr. Miller for spending his time enriching their learning experience.

Y3 Chanukah Party

On Tuesday, the third day of Chanukah, when we were off from school, Rabbi Grossman and his Y3 Gemara Shiur had a party at the home of the Gibbers. Rabbi Grossman shared a dvar Torah connected to Chanukah and the love we should have for the performance of mitzvot. Mrs. Amy Gibber prepared a feast for the Shiur with all kinds of meats, chicken and of course potato latkes. The desserts were donuts, rice crispy treats and brownies. Everyone had a wonderful time with their Rebbe and classmates and this will be an event that they will be talking about for a long time. Thank you again to Mr. and Mrs. Gibber.

Y17 Chanukah Party

Y17 enjoyed a mesibat Chanukah at the home of Rabbi Duvie Nachbar.

Yechiel Keiser & Akiva Reich Big Winners in Chanukah Raffle

Rabbi Grossman's son, Tzvi, donated two pairs of game worn sneakers signed by Rabbi Grossman's son, Tzvi, donated two pairs of game-worn sneakers signed by NBA players Paul George and Darren Williams. The first one is worth $1200, and the second $1,000. Yechiel Keiser won the Paul George sneakers, and Akiva Reich won the Darren Williams pair. Over $800 was raised the TABC Student Council, which helps students in need. Thank you to all the students who participated in the raffle, and thank you to Tzvi Grossman for the donation.
